EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Tourism is an economic development strategy for Australia that can deliver increasing economic activity, including jobs and business opportunities across the country. It is an industry in which Australia has significant natural advantages that, with the right investment and policy frameworks, could see the sector make an even greater contribution to economic activity.

Governments across the country have endorsed the Tourism 2020 target of doubling overnight visitor expenditure and are taking steps to grow their visitor economies. Reaching the $140 billion target will generate tens of billions of dollars in additional expenditure across Australia.

Australia’s location in the Asia-Pacific presents us with an unparalleled opportunity to benefit from the structural shift occurring in the global economy, including growing demand for travel from the burgeoning Asian middle classes, especially in China. However, this will not happen organically and it is essential to understand that other destinations have also recognised the potential of the growing wealth in Asia.

Not only will the emergence of an Asian travelling class continue to provide potential visitors, but their increasing buying power also makes them a key market for Australian goods and services, including food and wine, education, health and technology. Tourism can provide an entrée to future relationships which can further benefit the Australian economy, creating jobs, supporting regional and national development, and driving sustainable industry.

Especially with the mining investment boom waning and heavy manufacturing continuing to decline, tourism can play a critical role in our future prosperity. Maximising the benefits of this potential requires the removal of barriers for travellers from those markets. The cost and inconvenience of obtaining a visa to visit Australia represents one such barrier to travel. Reform to our visa processing system, as well as increased investment in marketing and visitor infrastructure, will be essential if we are to reach our Tourism 2020 expenditure goals.

Australia cannot afford to lose the competitive advantage of our proximity to Asia through complacency.

While Australia was at the forefront of facilitating travel as a signatory to the first UN protocol that recommended visa-free travel to foster international travel in 1963 and in introducing low-cost electronic travel authorities in the 1990s, progress has been slower in recent years. Other destinations have recognised the opportunity and are responding, with Australia’s offer no longer world leading.

While there is work underway to improve visitor visa processes, including a gradual move to online processing and the introduction of three-year, multiple entry visas for Chinese business travellers, a much more ambitious reform agenda is required if Australia is to maximise the opportunities of growing outbound travel from Asian markets. Australia must focus on reforms which will make a material difference and ensure that our offering is competitive with other destinations.

Regaining a world-leading position on visa processing has the potential to accelerate international visitation to Australia and deliver tens of billions of dollars a year in additional expenditure, helping to create thousands of jobs across the country. Doing so requires reforms to make it quicker, easier and more affordable for more international tourists to come to Australia.

TRAVELLERS SEE VISAS MAINLY AS A FORMALITY THAT IMPOSES A COST. IF THE COST OF OBTAINING A VISAA EXCEEDS A THRESHOLD, POTENTIAL TRAVELLERS ARE SIMPLY DETERRED FROM MAKING A PARTICULAR JOURNEY OR CHOOSE AN ALTERNATIVE DESTINATION WITH LESS HASSLE.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Prioritise the implementation of online visitor visa processing for key markets including China and India

Continue to review and simplify documentary requirements of visitor visa applications

Extend multiple-year multiple entry visas to leisure visitors and other countries

Review whether the needs of key source markets are being met and roll out forms in other languages

Examine the current visitor visa fee structure with a view to introducing a more equitable approach that recognises the economic contribution of tourism

Introduce a fee-for-service premium option for faster processing of visitor visas

Build on the Cricket World Cup single visa initiative to move towards common visitor visas for Australia and New Zealand
PART I – AN AGENDA FOR VISITOR VISA REFORM
INTRODUCTION

More than one billion people travelled internationally in 2012, setting a new milestone for the industry. By 2030 this figure is expected to top 1.8 billion, with the greatest share of this growth in the Asia Pacific.1

In Australia, tourism has been identified as one of five super-growth industries, capable of collectively delivering an additional AUD250 billion to the national economy over the next 20 years.2 Australian tourism is serious about meeting this opportunity, with the Australian government and all the states and territories and industry endorsing an aggressive tourism target as part of the Tourism 2020 Strategy.3 But essential to underpin the target of doubling overnight visitor spending to AUD140 billion a year by the end of the decade will be stronger and continuing growth in visitor arrivals from Asian markets.

The Tourism 2020 Strategy established a target range of AUD115 to 140 billion in annual overnight visitor spending, but at the moment even the lower end of the range seems out of reach.

We can, however, adjust current policy settings and dramatically increase Australia’s chances of achieving the top end of the target or even more. Reforms to our visitor visa scheme could be a key game changer in helping Australian tourism achieve its ambitions and maximise the potential of the visitor economy as an economic driver for Australia.

But there is work to do if we are to get there. While Australia was once seen as a leader in this area, signing up to the first United Nations’ protocol that recommended visa-free travel as a way to foster international travel and tourism4 in 1963, and introducing the Electronic Travel Authority (ETA) in 1996 – first for Singapore and US passport holders travelling on Qantas and Singapore Airlines5 – other countries have now caught up to and surpassed Australia.

The Henley & Partners Visa Restriction Index,6 which is produced in cooperation with the International Air Transport Association (IATA), points to how important the reform is for Australian tourism given our dependence on Asian source markets to underpin growth to reach our targets. The index ranks countries according to the visa-free access its citizens enjoy to travel to other countries. Citizens of Malaysia and South Korea are the least restricted among their Asian peers. Both countries rank high on the list, with their citizens able to travel to more than 160 countries visa-free. Nationals of other Asian source markets critical to Australia – such as China, India, Indonesia and Vietnam – face considerable travel restrictions to many of these destinations, in contrast to the ease of travel that Australians and other Western travellers enjoy.

REFORMS TO OUR VISITOR VISA SCHEME COULD BE A KEY GAME CHANGER IN HELPING AUSTRALIAN TOURISM ACHIEVE ITS AMBITIONS AND MAXIMISE THE POTENTIAL OF THE VISITOR ECONOMY AS AN ECONOMIC DRIVER FOR AUSTRALIA.

OUR COMPARATIVE STANDING WHEN IT COMES TO VISITOR VISAS HAS SLIPPED IN RECENT YEARS AS OTHER DESTINATIONS HAVE IDENTIFIED STREAMLINED VISITOR VISA ARRANGEMENTS AS A KEY COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE AND HAVE STARTED TO RESPOND WITH INNOVATIVE AND ATTRACTIVE OFFERS.

TTF’s Australia in the Asian Century: Visitor Economy Report Card7 asked whether Australia’s visitor visa processes were streamlined, timely and cost-competitive. More than half of respondents rated Australia’s current efforts around visitor visas as requiring work (D) or failing (F).

TTF has long championed easing of visa restrictions as a potential competitive advantage for Australia. The country’s comparative standing when it comes to visitor visas has slipped in recent years as other destinations have identified streamlined visitor visa arrangements as a key competitive advantage and have started to respond with innovative and attractive offers.

There is mounting evidence that improvements in visa facilitation lead to increased visitation, spending and job creation in the destination countries, making it imperative for Australia to prioritise investment and reform in this critical area.

This report features a comparison of Australia’s visitor visa regime with that of our major competitor destinations when it comes to key Asian growth source markets to set out the facts behind our call for quicker, easier and more affordable visitor visas.

AUSTRALIA’S VISITOR VISA SYSTEM

Australia’s universal visa system requires that all those travelling to Australia who are not Australian citizens or residents have a visa to enter Australia, except New Zealand citizens who can apply for a visa on arrival. Visitors to Australia, depending on their country of citizenship, require one of the following visas:

Electronic Travel Authority (subclass 601)
- for nationals of low risk countries
- application can be completed online and must be made from outside Australia
- valid for 12 months with three months’ stay permitted on each entry
- service charge of AUD20 for this application

eVisitor (subclass 651)
- for European nationals
- application can be completed online and must be made from outside Australia
- valid for 12 months with three months’ stay permitted on each entry
- no charge for the application

Subclass 600 visa
- has four streams – tourist, sponsored family, business visitor and Approved Destination Status (ADS) streams
- either paper-based or online application depending on nationality, must initially be made from outside Australia but can also be applied for to extend a person’s stay
- generally granted for a three, six or 12-month period for either single or multiple entries
- cost of AUD130

As the Australian tourism industry looks increasingly to Asian markets to realise its ambitions of achieving AUD140 billion in overnight visitor expenditure by the end of the decade, the disparity between the requirements of our traditional source markets and visitors from some of these key Asian markets requires close review. Existing visa requirements mean a Chinese independent traveller faces a fee of AUD130, has to produce considerable evidence, complete a 15-page paper-based application and wait up to 15 days for processing. In contrast, a potential visitor from the United States, Britain or even Hong Kong can simply fill in a quick online form and receive an electronic visa for AUD20. Similar barriers impact potential visitors from India, Indonesia and Vietnam.

VISA FACILITATION AS A COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE

The Tourism Ministers’ Summit held in conjunction with the 2012 World Travel Market in London concluded that visa processes and policies continue to be barriers to international travel, with restrictive visa policies and complex entry formalities impacting the growth of the industry. This is particularly the case for emerging economies – including those in Asia – which represent the fastest-growing outbound travel markets.8

The difficulty and complexity of obtaining visas deter potential travellers, acting effectively as a barrier to trade. As countries look to facilitate cross-border movement of goods to support their international trade agendas, removing restrictions on the movement of travellers should receive equal attention.9

While considerable progress has been made in recent decades to facilitate travel, there are still significant opportunities to improve visa procedures through technology and information sharing. Research jointly commissioned by the World Travel & Tourism Council and the UN World Tourism Organization estimated the potential increased visitation, economic activity and job creation which could result from reforms in visa processes – with the potential for an extra five million jobs in G20 countries in the coming years.10

Visa facilitation efforts have generally led to increases in tourism demand for the destination country, with case studies showing an increase in arrivals of five to 25 per cent following policy setting adjustments.11 Opportunities for improved visa facilitation include enhanced information for potential visitors, enhanced information sharing between governments, reduced documentation and increased processing capacity.

Many countries have identified streamlined visitor visa arrangements as a key competitive advantage and are responding to the opportunity more quickly than Australia. Every month, other countries are announcing their efforts to make it easier for visitors to come to their countries.

Evidence of this renewed focus on making travel for Chinese citizens easier can be found in both Australia’s traditional competitor set and also in those countries emerging as new rivals for Asian visitors.

For example, India recently announced it would offer visas on arrival to visitors from 180 countries at its major airports, up from the current 11 countries.12 Responding to growing demand from China, already their largest visa market, the UK government recently announced that 24-hour Super Priority Visas would be available to potential visitors in Beijing, Shanghai and Guangzhou.13 The introduction of same-day visas for repeat international travellers follows other recent improvements including a pass-back service which allows visitors to apply for the UK and Schengen visa at the same time, launch of a new online form with fewer questions, premium service lounges in key cities and reduced documentary requirements for repeat visitors.

The European Commission is debating proposals to make short-stay visas more flexible to increase travel to the Schengen area. It is expected this could increase trips by 30 to 60 percent, generating EUR130 billion in additional spending and 1.3 million tourism jobs within five years. Some of the changes being proposed include reducing processing time, simplifying supporting documents and expediting requests for multiple-entry visas and extending the length of stay.14

Countries are recognising the positive and significant signal that visitor visa facilitation can have. In light of the impact of recent political turmoil on its reputation as a travel destination, Thailand implemented a series of tourism promotion measures including extending existing visitor visas by 30 days and offering free visas for Chinese tourists.15 Probably the most significant challenge Australia faces is the focus that the United States has given to improving its visitor visa processes. The US Department of State has made significant investments to dramatically reduce wait times for interviews and to improve the visitor experience with increases in staffing and streamlining of the application procedures.16 In fact, Chinese visitors to the United States can now pick up their visas at any of the 900 China CITIC Bank branches instead of at a US embassy.17

Visitor Visa Reform: Reducing the barriers for travel to Australia
TTF’S VISITOR VISA REFORM AGENDA

TTF has been an active participant in discussions around visitor visa reforms for a number of years. While the commitment to rolling out online processing to all countries was strongly applauded when announced in 2013, the pace of overall reform must increase dramatically if Australia hopes to maintain or grow market share. We recognise that progress is being made – including the gradual move to online processing for all countries and the introduction of three-year, multiple entry visas for Chinese business travellers – however, much more ambitious reforms are needed if Australia is to maximise the opportunities of the increase in travel in Asia.

Critical visitor visa reforms

| ONLINE | The implementation of online visitor visa processing across all countries must prioritise key growth source markets. While recognising the overall workload in implementing online processing to markets such as China and India is significant, the current approach of tackling smaller but less important markets is delaying the benefits which could be achieved from the move to online applications for these key markets.
|        | The move to online applications also presents an opportunity to reduce processing costs, enabling resources to be redirected to reducing processing times and other passenger processing responsibilities.
|        | Prioritise the implementation of online visitor visa processing for key markets including China and India. |

| SIMPLIFY | The current visitor visa documentary requirements can prove prohibitive to potential visitors. Recent work to simplify the list of information and document requirements is welcome and should continue. Other countries are taking further steps to streamline requirements for repeat visitors or those with a specific frequent flyer status – to minimise requirements for frequent travellers.
|          | Visitors who have already been to Australia and have complied with all visa requirements should face a significantly reduced evidentiary burden. This approach should allow for faster processing of repeat visitors while enabling additional resources to be dedicated to first-time visitors.
|          | Continue to review and simplify documentary requirements of visitor visa applications. |

| MULTIPLE-ENTRY | The option of three-year multiple-entry visas for the business visitor stream for Chinese visitors presents a real opportunity to improve Australia’s competitiveness while reducing processing costs. The further roll-out of similar options for leisure visitors and to other markets is essential if Australia is to match the offering of other competitors who have introduced similar products over recent years.
|                 | Similar to other reforms above, multiple-entry visas reduce processing costs but would also encourage repeat visits.
|                 | Extend multiple-year multiple-entry visas to leisure visitors and other countries. |

| ACCESSIBLE | Recognising that the department, individual embassies and consulates, and in-market travel agents produce forms, instructions and other materials in a number of languages to assist visitors in applying for visitor visas, there is a need to review current practices to ensure that potential visitors are provided with the relevant information required in their language to facilitate the visitor visa application process.
|            | Review whether the needs of key source markets are being met and roll out forms in other languages. |
There is a need to examine the current visa fee structure with a view to introducing a new approach to address inequities in visitor visa costs between Australia’s traditional and emerging source markets. Visitors from Malaysia, Hong Kong and Singapore face an AUD20 service fee and visitors from Europe can apply for free, while visitors from our key target markets such as China face an application fee of AUD130.

With the eventual roll-out of the electronic platform to all nationalities and simplified forms with reduced evidentiary requirements, the cost of processing should be reduced across all visitor visa classes facilitating a review of the current fee structure.

There is also a need to consider the significant economic benefit derived from international visitors and to not view the visa fee as a revenue source to government.

Examine the current visitor visa fee structure with a view to introducing a more equitable approach that recognises the economic contribution of tourism.

Introducing a user-pays premium visitor visa processing model would provide a faster option for passengers willing to pay for this service. A number of competitor destinations are introducing this service responding to shifts in trip planning behaviour and visitor demand. A premium visitor visa processing model should include an option for premium customs and immigration clearance on arrival.

The development and ongoing administration of a premium service should be designed to not impact on resourcing for other visitor visa processing.

Introduce a fee-for-service premium option for faster processing of visitor visas.

There is an opportunity to examine the outcomes of the current Australia-New Zealand joint visitor visa processing approach for the 2015 Cricket World Cup to assess opportunities for further joint visitor visa initiatives in the future. The experience of working together and having established information-sharing and data-transfer protocols should provide a head start to future work. Common visas would provide a competitive advantage for both countries, recognising the attractiveness of multiple country visitor visas such as those offered by Schengen countries and an increasing number of neighbouring countries.

Build on the Cricket World Cup single visa initiative to move towards common visitor visas for Australia and New Zealand.
This section of the report will look at the Australian visitor visa requirements and processes for visitors from Australia’s key Asian source markets – China, Malaysia, South Korea India, Vietnam and Indonesia. A similar examination of requirements and processes in New Zealand, the United Kingdom, the United States, Canada and the Schengen area is also undertaken to highlight the opportunities for Australia to create competitive advantage by reviewing, streamlining and improving its visitor visa system.

General overview of Australia’s visitor visa program

History of Australia’s visitor visa program

Australia’s visitor visa program has undergone significant change over the past few decades. Prior to 1989, immigration officers had responsibility to grant a visa or entry permit to a non-citizen based on criteria set out in a series of policy manuals. This approach was replaced after a 1994 review by the Joint Standing Committee on Migration in relation to the effectiveness of the program brought about the first major changes to the program, creating a simpler, more streamlined and consistent application and assessment process.

The most recent changes to the visitor visa program took effect in March 2013 through the implementation of the Migration Amendment Regulation 2013 (No. 1), an amendment to the Migration Regulations 1994 undertaken as part of the government’s Better Regulation Ministerial Partnership between the then Minister for Immigration and Citizenship and Minister for Finance and Deregulation announced in June 2010, which included a commitment to reducing the total number of visa subclasses by the end of 2015.

Australia’s current visitor visa program

Australia’s universal visa system requires that all those travelling to Australia who are not Australian citizens require a visa to enter Australia. The following visitor visa classes are available to visitors to Australia, depending on their country of citizenship (see Appendix A for details).

- Electronic Travel Authority (subclass 601)
  - The Electronic Travel Authority (ETA) is for those considered low risk nationals
  - Valid for 12 months with three months’ stay permitted on each entry to Australia
  - Application can be completed online and must be made from outside Australia
  - There is currently a service charge of AUD20 for this application

- eVisitor (subclass 651)
  - The eVisitor visa is for European nationals
  - Valid for 12 months with three months’ stay permitted on each entry to Australia
  - Application can be completed online and must be made from outside Australia
  - There is no charge for the application

- Subclass 600 visa
  - Comprised of four streams: tourist, sponsored family, business visitor and Approved Destination Status (ADS) streams
  - Depending on the applicant’s nationality, the application may be either paper-based or online
  - Generally granted for a three, six or less commonly 12-month period for either single or multiple entries to Australia
  - Application must initially be made from outside Australia, but can also be applied for to extend a person’s stay once they are in Australia
  - There is a cost of AUD130 for the application

Other elements of Australia’s visitor visa system

Australia’s participation in China’s Approved Destination Status scheme

Australia obtained Approved Destination Status (ADS) with China in 1999, which is now administered through an ADS stream of the subclass 600 visa. This bilateral tourism agreement is designed for nationals of the People’s Republic of China (excluding Hong Kong and Macau) who are participating in a tour organised by a travel agent specified by the Minister. Applicants must follow a prescribed tour although the visa allows for some flexibility in itinerary. These applications are lodged with the Department of Immigration and Border Protection (DIBP) through a flat file system in groups of at least two applicants by the travel agent.

Australia’s Preferred Aussie Specialist program

The Preferred Aussie Specialist (PAS) program, introduced in December 2003 as a joint initiative with Tourism Australia, has selected travel agents that have been recommended by Tourism Australia and approved by DIBP. Applications lodged through PAS agents are generally fast-tracked. This program currently exists in India, Mexico, Indonesia and Thailand. PAS agents in India are also able to lodger online applications.

General overview of the visitor visa program

Immigration New Zealand (INZ) has focused on increasing visitor numbers generally with NZD7 million in dedicated funding announced in April 2013 to achieve this. The funding has been targeted at creating a bilingual website and application forms to help applicants more easily understand the process. In the first instance, this has been developed for Chinese visitors with a view to expanding into other key market languages.

Like Australia, New Zealand obtained Approved Destination Status (ADS) with China in 1999, facilitating travel from Chinese tour groups. INZ has recently completed a China Market Review to establish objectives to increase their market share of Chinese visitors and has introduced the following measures:

- INZ and carriers Air New Zealand and China Southern Airlines have agreed that Chinese applicants who have a certain frequent flyer status under their respective programs will not have to provide evidence of employment or sufficient funds as part of their application process.
- Working with Air New Zealand, Auckland Airport and China Southern Airlines to streamline visa processes for Chinese tourists more generally.
- Chinese visitors can now be granted 24-month multi-entry tourist visas.

While New Zealand has 31 different visitor visa categories for a range of visitor-based activities, for the purpose of general tourism most nationals would either be subject to visa waiver arrangements whereby they would not need to make an application for stays of three months or less for tourism purposes or, alternatively, would need to apply for a V2.1 visa for a stay of up to 12 months with multiple entries possible.

For visitors from visa waiver countries, there is no requirement to make an online or paper-based application prior to travel. Visas are issued upon arrival by INZ at the airport for a stay of up to three months.

General overview of the visitor visa program

The United Kingdom has a range of visitor visa categories including but not limited to those coming as academics, coming prior to the commencement of study, medical treatment and those coming to visit family, etc.

The vast majority of visitor visa applications for the United Kingdom are submitted online.

In most cases a visitor visa would be valid for a maximum six-month period. Regular travellers who have had a number of UK business visit visas issued in the past, and have always met the requirements outlined in the immigration rules, have the option of applying for a five or ten-year multiple-entry visitor visa permitting travel to the UK throughout that time, limited to a maximum of six months in any 12-month period.

The United Kingdom signed a Memorandum of Understanding with China in January 2005 to facilitate entry of Chinese visitors under the Approved Destination Status (ADS). The agreement includes tour groups of five or more people for a period not exceeding 30 days which are organised by an ADS-licensed tour operator.

The UK has also announced some changes in line with an increased focus on Chinese visitors:

- A 24-hour service for general and business visitors launched in August 2014
- A pilot program that commenced in November 2013 enabling selected travel agents applying for visitor visas through the ADS scheme to make an offline application using the Schengen application forms with an addendum form to cover the UK as well

The UK has introduced priority processing services for visitor visa applications for some countries, but currently just for business visitors for 90 countries, with additional countries to be added.

There is a visa waiver program in place for nationals of Oman, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates that commenced in January 2014 that allows for stays of up to six months.12 Applicants need to register online 48 hours before departure. Kuwait is expected to be added to this list later this year.

Visa Waiver Program

The U.S. Department of State (DOS) consular officer who issues the visa must be satisfied that the foreign national is entitled to a non-immigrant status. Notably, the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA)’s 214(b) generally presumes that all aliens seeking admission to the United States are coming to live permanently. As a result, most aliens seeking to qualify for a non-immigrant visa must demonstrate that they are not coming to reside permanently.

The U.S. has expanded the visa waiver program (VWP), which allows nationals from 36 countries to enter the United States as temporary visitors for business or pleasure without obtaining a visa from a U.S. consulate abroad. The INA provides for the temporary admission of various categories of foreign nationals, known as non-immigrants. Non-immigrants are admitted for a temporary period of time and a specific purpose, including as tourists, students, and temporary workers.

Many non-immigrant visas are valid for multiple entries as well as multiple years.

The U.S. has had Approved Destination Status (ADS) in place since 2008.

In 2012, the President signed an Executive Order establishing a new Task Force on Travel and Competitiveness leading to the development of a National Travel and Tourism Strategy with a goal of attracting 100 million international visitors by 2021, generating spending of USD260 billion annually. The strategy includes reforms in the areas of traveller facilitation including expanding their Visa Waiver Program, enhancing visa processing and expanding trusted traveller programs.

General overview of the visitor visa program

Citizenship and Immigration Canada (CIC) continues to expand its network of visa application centres (VACs) to facilitate faster processing times. It is expected that by the end of 2014, there will be over 133 VACs in 96 countries and all VACs will be equipped to collect biometric information.

In Canada, visitors are a class of temporary residents who are legally authorised to enter the country temporarily to holiday, visit family, conduct business, etc. Depending on an individual’s nationality, a foreign national may be required to obtain a temporary resident visa (TRV) before he or she is permitted to enter Canada (see Appendix C). If a foreign national requires a TRV, they must submit an application to a visa office outside Canada before travelling.

Canada obtained Approved Destination Status (ADS) with China in 2010, facilitating Chinese national tour groups to enter Canada.

In July 2011, the duration of multiple-entry visas was increased from five years to 10 years, allowing visitors to enter and exit Canada for up to six months at a time over the period. As of February 2014, visitors will automatically be considered for a 10-year multiple entry visa. At the same time, the fee for the TRV was reduced from CAD150 to CAD100 for the processing of either a single- or multiple-entry visa.

There is a maximum fee of CAD500 for families applying for visitor visas.

Certain foreign nationals seeking temporary entry to Canada are now required to give fingerprints and have their photograph taken as part of their application for temporary residence, if their country of nationality is one of the 30 selected countries. Within the Asia-Pacific region, currently only Vietnam, Cambodia and Burma require biometrics for applicants for a Canadian visitor visa. If an applicant is required to submit biometrics, there is an additional fee of CAD85 per person, and similar to the TRV, there is a maximum fee of CAD170 for families.

CIC is working towards a fully paperless system to facilitate information sharing and communication between offices and introduced the Global Case Management System in December 2012 to accept electronic applications for TRVs and visitor extensions whether applicants are in Canada or abroad. Applicants can pay their fees, submit their applications and upload their supporting documents online.

Visitor Visa Reform: Reducing the barriers for travel to Australia

Visitor Visa Reform: Reducing the barriers for travel to Australia

General overview of the visitor visa program

Travelling in Europe has been simplified with the introduction of the so-called Schengen visa, which is comprised of 26 European countries. The current participating countries are Austria, Belgium, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

The Schengen visa allows for a person to travel from one member state to another within the Schengen region during the validity of the visa. Internal border controls are limited with no or few stops and checks.

Because a visa for one Schengen country is also valid for other Schengen countries, the member states have a duty to notify each other about the arrival of foreign nationals, though the implementation of this requirement varies between jurisdictions.

There is, in principle, only one visa option which is the C-visa, which is for short stays in the Schengen area. The visa is not intended as a business visa though allowed activities vary between member states.

The short-stay visa is limited to a maximum of three months in a six-month period. Longer stays required a National Visa (D-visa) which is issued by individual countries.

Approved Destination Status (ADS) was agreed between the Schengen countries and China in 2003. Applications from those participating in an ADS tour will be lodged by an approved travel agent for groups of at least five, but not more than 50, applicants.
