

Seamus McCartney

Head of Strategic Product and Place - Urban Regeneration

Seamus McCartney, B Arch., BPC, BPD (Hons), is the Head of Strategic Product and Place, Urban Regeneration for Lendlease Development Australia. In this role, Seamus is charged with overseeing the delivery of Urban Strategy and Masterplanning across current and prospective projects and maintaining our competitive advantage in this area by creating places that are authentic, liveable and sustainable through the harmonisation of economic development, property development and urban design.

Seamus has over 17 years of experience in property, construction, design and development, with a particular focus on large, mixed use regeneration of urban precincts in and adjacent to core areas of economic activity in gateway cities to drive quality, commercial and customer driven outcomes.

He specialises in project formation through to product creation, place and experience, and has led all aspects of the development projects from initial feasibility and design through to sales and marketing, delivery, handover and financial close. Seamus has spent a significant part of his career utilising the principles of Urban Strategy and Place Development to create value for our business. In his current role he is developing our thought leadership position in this area and engaging with partners and industry to grow this capability.

During his 13 year Lendlease tenure, Seamus has played leadership roles in numerous major projects both in regional and international contexts, including Victoria Harbour, RNA, Waterbank, Darling Harbour, Elephant and Castle in Southwark and the 2012 London Olympics Athletes Village Precinct in Stratford. He is an experienced team leader, having previously held the role of General Manager of Urban Retail, which included holding responsibility for investment performance of our retail assets and head leases.
